Falling Leaves Adeline Yen Mah

"I read for two nights, sleepless, my heart pierced by Adeline Yen Mah's account of her terrible childhood. Falling Leaves is a potent psychological drama pitting a stubborn little girl against the most merciless of adversaries and rivals: her own family. I am still haunted by Mah's memoir." —Amy Tan, author of The Joy Luck Club

Falling Leaves: The Memoir of an Unwanted Chinese Daughter ...

Falling Leaves is an extremely well-written Autobiography by Adeline Yen Mah. By far one of the best I have read recently BUT before you rush out and add it to your TBR, please be warned, it is as depressing as hell. Adeline recounts her life from her birth in 1937, she was born in Tianjin, China.

Falling Leaves Characters | GradeSaver

Thus, Adeline aligns her family's troubled history with the historic "collision of East and West." Just as "falling leaves return to their roots," Adeline's memoir reflects on the ways her childhood "roots" have affected her development. She positions Niang as a symbol for the imperial cruelty, prejudice, and racism she both witnesses and experiences throughout her life.
