Ossessione

Ossessione [[ˌɔsɛsˈsɔːne], "Obsession") is a 1943 Italian film based on the 1934 novel The Postman Always Rings Twice, by James M. Cain. Luchino Visconti's first feature film, it is considered by many to be the first Italian neorealist film, though there is some debate about whether such a categorization is accurate.

Ossessione is a key work of Italian cinema, cited by writers such as Marcia Landy as the first work of Italian Neo-Realism (rather than the more frequently cited Rome, Citta Aperta). It is also a European work that is influenced by James M Cain's classic slice of roman-noir, The Postman Always Rings Twice- which would also influence Camus's L ...

The Mosby Ossessione is our first true Italian import. Bill traveled to Italy and worked in conjunction with grape growers there to produce this wine. The grapes are from a pampered vineyard located in the rolling hills of the Marche, Italy. Swept and cooled by breezes off the Adriatic Sea, this area is renowned for its intensely-flavored ...

Ossessione (1976) Acknowledged as the first film of the Italian neo-realist movement, Ossessione (Obsession) (1942) was also the remarkably assured directorial debut of Luchino Visconti. Loosely based on James M. Cain's 1934 novel The Postman Always Rings Twice, with the setting moved from California to Italy's Po Valley, Ossessione is a dark melodrama of adultery, murder and betrayal.
