Bank profit: formation and use. Profit - the main financial indicator of the bank's performance; the size of the bank's profit is important for all who are relevant to this area. Shareholders or shareholders of the bank profit is required as a norm of return on invested capital. Borrowers are indirectly interested in its sufficiency - the bank's ability to issue loans and make other investments depends on the size and structure of its own capital, and profit is one of its main sources.
